I Performed Clustering with the following two sets of settings

Linkage	Include Covariance	Coordinates	Distance Measure	Number of Clusters
complete	True	Pull	euclidean	5
complete	False	p-val	manhattan	2

This gave the following results:
The second clustering seems to have almost sliced the data along the c9 variable, whereas the first has given much much more complex results.